

2022 Maryland Primary Candidate Survey State Legislative District 38

The Maryland Council for American Private Education (CAPE) advocates for the interests of the 125,000-plus nonpublic students in Maryland and their families. We invited all gubernatorial and General Assembly candidates to respond to a brief candidate survey (“support” or “oppose”), and provide a brief comment on each answer, on critical issues for non-public schools in Maryland. All of the survey responses and election links are online at www.mdnonpubs.org.

Primary Election is July 19 (early voting July 7-14)

NOTE: Some districts have new boundaries due to redistricting

Response key:

S: agree; O: disagree; - : no response | D: Democrat | R: Republican

Open-ended Candidate Answers

District 38 State Senator Candidates

Mary Beth Carozza (R)

Q1: Aid to nonpublic schools: There is no greater responsibility to our youth than keeping them safe and educating them for their future. Some children respond more productively in smaller settings with more personal attention as many nonpublic schools provide. Given the recent difficulties created by COVID lockdowns and school shootings, students may feel safer in nonpublic schools.

Q2: Public dollars: Currently, taxpayers’ dollars go into the general fund that supports public schools. They are supporting something they never use if they do not attend public schools. It is a matter of fairness and choice. Their tax dollars should be allowed to support nonpublic schools so long as they are certified.

Q3: Educational scholarships: Parents whose hard-earned dollars are taxed for education deserve to select the school that provides the best environment, both scholastically and socially for their children

Q4: BOOST: If we want to provide an education to all students equally, we need to help funding for low-income students to attend whichever accredited school best suits their needs.

Q5: Capital dollars: In this instance, those who desire to start and support a private school should do so with the knowledge that the costs of those schools, including security upgrades is a financial responsibility they have chosen to accept. However, if society and federal or state mandates require certain measures of nonpublic schools, those should be subsidized by the entity that has mandated them.

Gubernatorial Candidates

Peter Franchot (D)

Q1: Nonpublic school aid: I will increase funding in our grant programs and award funding to organizations that provide grassroots support for the communities they serve. Preference will always be given to public schools and state programs. However, if a nonpublic school demonstrates that they are philanthropically engaged in their communities, do not discriminate against any students, and are in need of financial assistance, I am willing to award funding on a case-by-case basis.

Q2: Public dollars: I will be an education-oriented governor, and I am committed to improving all of Maryland's public schools so that there is not a disparity in the quality of education between private and public education. That said, I have committed to maintaining the BOOST program, so long as funding is used specifically for those students who would not be able to otherwise attend the school.

Q3: Education scholarships: My funding priority will be the state's public schools. I believe support for private schools should be limited and strategic.

Q4: BOOST: I am on record in support of doubling the BOOST program to support families in need.

Q5: Capital dollars: Investment in our public schools will be the priority. I am willing to explore on a case-by-case basis the state providing support to ensure that all Maryland students can learn in a safe environment.

Douglas F. Gansler (D)

Q1: Nonpublic school aid: I support both robust investment in public schools as well as support for non-public schools, particularly in the areas of security, mental health professionals, and tuition assistance so that parents are empowered to send children to the school of their choice. Furthermore, as a Jewish man, I recognize and respect that some parents want to send their children to religious schools.

Q2: Public dollars: I think the sentence "public dollars are only for public schools" is loaded and suggests a zero sum game that pits private and public schools against each other. Maryland is sitting on an unprecedented surplus. I support the Blueprint's once-in-a-generation opportunity to make historic investments in our public schools, and I will work hard to implement it. I also believe that we should expand educational opportunities at non-profit and religious schools so that parents are empowered to choose the school that is right for their child.

Q3: Education scholarships: I support the use of tax dollars to empower parents to choose the right school for their child. However, Maryland should ensure that the schools who benefit from this support are held accountable to inclusive and non-discriminatory environments.

Q4: BOOST: I support increasing funding for BOOST to empower low-income families, including families who want to send their children to a religious school, to be able to afford the school of their choice.

Q5: Capital dollars: My number one priority for all schools is to ensure the safety of the students, educators, support staff and everyone on school grounds. I support allocating state tax dollars for both security and infrastructure upgrades so that all schools are safe learning environments.

Dan Cox (R)

Q1: Nonpublic school aid: I support the dollars following the children by parental choice.

Q4: BOOST: And I would expand this program.
